Proposed Ordinance Authorizing Acquisition of Real Property

for Ware Creek Reservoir/Nice Brothers

On May 9, 1983, the Board of Supervisors adopted the attached ordinance as an emergency ordinance that would authorize acquisition of certain property owned by Nice Properties, Incorporated.

The ordinance authorizes the County Administrator to negotiate for the property within the limits of the amount set forth, $119,350. In addition, it meets certain other legal requirements set forth in the Code of Virginia.

The owner of the property will have 30 days from May 15, 1983 in which to contest the taking. Thereafter, the owner may petition the Court to obtain the amount of funds set forth in the ordinance at anytime.

We have begun preliminary negotiations with Nice Properties, Inc. and it is my hope that this matter will be worked out without need for litigation.

I recommend that the Board adopt the attached ordinance.

Respectfully submitted,

Re: James City County, Virginia

v.

Nice Properties Co., a Virginia corporation

Dear Frank:

In connection with the above captioned and pursuant to the various questions raised by Mr. Thomas D. Mahone at the meeting of the Board of Supervisors on Monday, June 13, 1983, I have investigated the applicable statutes of the Commonwealth of Virginia for the purpose of determining the most advantageous route available to James City County, Virginia.

Based upon my investigation and upon my exerience representing other condemning authorities for similar projects, I would not recommend the inclusion of any right of first refusal in the Ordinance. Such a right would be revocable at will by the Board of Supervisors and, accordingly, would not reduce the market value of the subject property. This would result in James City County, Virginia, paying the landowner the full market value of the property and then, for no consideration, giving the landowner the right of first refusal.

Section 15.1-238(e) gives to the County those powers granted to the Highway and Transportation Commissioner pursuant to § 33.1-119 through 33.1-129 of the 1950 Code of Virginia, as amended. Sections 33.1-121 and 33.1-122 provide that a certificate may be issued in lieu of payment stating that the money designated therein will be paid pursuant to the order of the court and upon recordation of the certificate in the clerk's office, the interest or estate of the owner of such property shall terminate and the title to such property shall be vested in the Commissioner (i.e. the County); however, § 33.1-132 provides no suit to establish the value of the land taken or damages to the residue, if any, must be instituted until the project has been completed, a reasonable time for the completion of the project has expired, or until one (1) year after the recordation of the certificate, in which event the property owner may petition the court for the appointment of commissioners to determine the compensation for the property taken and the damages to the residue, if any. Accordingly, no suit to complete the acquisition of the property would be instituted until June of 1984 and then only upon the petition of the property owner and no trial would be scheduled until sometime after that date. In the meantime, the County would be able to determine the feasibility of the project. If the project is unfeasible, the County pursuant to § 33.1-125 could petition the court to invalidate the certificate which would effectively revest title in the original owners of record. Please note, however, that nothing contained in § 33.1-125 is to be construed to prohibit or preclude any person damaged thereby from showing in the proper proceeding the damage suffered by reason of such invalidation of a certificate of deposit. Accordingly, the landowner could attempt to hold the County responsible for the damages which I would anticipate would be in the nature of the fair market value rental for the subject property for the period of time between the recordation of the certificate and the invalidation of the certificate. These damages probably would be offset by the interest requirements of § 33.1-128.

For the reasons outlined above, I would respectfully suggest that the Board of Supervisors adopt the Ordinance in the form as presented on June 13, 1983.

Very truly yours,

ANDERSON, EMMETT & FRANCK
